The Wealth Building Playbook

Three keynotes, one expert panel, and a room full of operators — in one day. This is where you keep what you take from it, and what you do with it on Monday.

Two ways to use this

Type into it, right here

Every box in this PDF is a real field. Fill it in on a laptop or in a PDF app on your phone, then save the file — that copy is yours to keep and to keep editing.

Or print it and write

Twelve pages, and it prints clean in black and white. No battery, no app, no wifi.

Want the math done for you? Use the live version breakthroughokc.com/playbook is the same workbook in your browser. It saves as you type and works out the two calculations for you. In this PDF you do that arithmetic yourself — each one shows you the formula and a worked example.

Either way, finish the last page

Monday, September 28 is the whole point. A day of notes nobody acts on is a day off work.

Your answers stay in this file, on your device. Nothing is sent anywhere.

Take Back Your Town: Profitable Redevelopment

Twenty years ago Katie bought a $17,000 condo. It pulled her out of commercial banking and into rebuilding her hometown — today a $20M portfolio of boutique apartments, mixed-use buildings, townhomes and cottage clusters in downtown Bryan, Texas. Take Back Your Town is the method she teaches: walk the blocks before you run the numbers.

Take Back Your Town, as she teaches it

Capture each step of the method in your own words while Katie walks through it. Write it the way you'd explain it to a friend, not word for word.

The case study

Katie shares someone who got past a real barrier. Get the shape of it down.

Who, or what project?

What stood in the way?

What got them past it?

The block you're watching

Pick one street, block or small area you know. Run it through what you just heard.

Where is it?

What's changing there right now? New businesses, vacant buildings, city projects, new traffic, who's buying.

What would you need to know before the comps move?

Who could tell you?

Her three practical steps, and yours

Katie closes with three steps. Write each one down, then what you'll actually do with it.

Your edge

Where are you competing with bigger money, and where do you have an edge they can't buy?

Funding Oklahoma Investors Can Leverage

Hosted by Katie Neason, with Darrell Beavers (Oklahoma Housing Finance Agency) and Shannon Entz (City

City and state programs exist for Oklahoma investors, but most are built for a specific kind of project. This section is how you find out which ones fit yours, and who to call.

Before it starts: your project

Most programs depend on what you're doing and where. Knowing this is what makes your question answerable.

- ☐ Building new ☐ Rehabbing ☐ Buying to rent ☐ Buying to flip ☐ Homes for owner-occupants
- ☐ Not sure yet

Where? City or county

How big? Homes or units

Your questions for the panel

Write them now, so you're ready when the mic comes around.

Cameron Burke

Leverage: Marketing, Systems & Delegation To Scale

Cameron started at 18 with a license, a little saved cash and no leverage — and went nine months without a closing. What changed was not effort. It was finding one piece of real leverage, then stacking another on top of it, and another.

Small force or resource to gain a larger advantage.

CAMERON BURKE · WHAT LEVERAGE ACTUALLY MEANS

The eight forms – which one are you missing?

He walks all eight. Some get you in the door; some multiply what you already have. Tick the ones genuinely working in your business today. The blank ones are the point.

☐ Unique value ☐ Cash ☐ Marketing ☐ Debt ☐ People ☐ Brand ☐ Systems ☐ AI

The one I'm missing that would change the most

What it would actually take to put it in place

Your number

His litmus test before hiring anyone: know your dollar per hour. Net, not gross.

HOW IT WORKS

Net ÷ hours worked = your hourly number. His example: $180,000 ÷ 2,000 hours = $90 an hour.

Your net, last 12 months

÷ Hours you actually worked in those 12 months

= Your hourly number

Every hour you spend on work somebody else could do costs you this much.

The trade

His example: a transaction coordinator at $3,500 a month, against $6,000 a month of his own time doing admin. Easy trade. Run yours.

HOW IT WORKS

Hours a month × your hourly number = what doing it yourself costs. 60 hours × $90 = $5,400 a month, against $3,500 to hire it out.

The work you'd hand off

What it would cost to hire out, per month

Hours a month that work takes you

× your hourly number from above = what doing it yourself costs

Bigger than the cost to hire out?

Easy trade — hand it off

Not yet

If doing it yourself costs more than hiring it out, that is the whole decision.

Your week, honestly

Income-producing work is high leverage — finding deals, making offers, talking to sellers. Everything else is a candidate to hand off.

TASK I DO EVERY WEEK	HOURS / WEEK	KEEP, DELEGATE OR AUTOMATE?

Hand one thing off properly

He hired a transaction coordinator before he had systems, and called the result chaos. Handing work over is not the same as handing over a closed loop.

The first thing you'd hand over

Who would own it?

How will you know it got done, without checking yourself?

What happens when it doesn't?

Start where the chaos is

His answer to “which system do I build first” is whatever feels like chaos right now. His own contract-to-close system fits on one page: who does what, in what order.

What feels like chaos in my business right now

The first system I'll write down

Who runs it once it exists?

Your buy box, in three numbers

Every deal he buys runs through the same three. Write yours — and if you don't have them yet, that's the takeaway.

THE NUMBER	HIS	YOURS
All-in cost	Under 70% of ARV
Cash-on-cash	25% minimum
Exit	Has to be refinanceable

Data is leverage

His words: it shows you the pulse of the business, so you know which lever to pull.

The one number you'll watch every week

Two things that stop people

He names both: fear that outweighs your goals, and lifestyle creep that eats the leverage you just built. One honest line each.

The fear that's currently bigger than my goal

Where lifestyle creep is showing up for me

The line you're writing down

Ben Allgeyer

How I Lost $1M Scaling Wrong, And Built A Lean System That Works

Ben has done 500+ deals in eight years across all 50 states and runs six companies. His session is both halves: what scaling the wrong way cost him, and the lean system he runs now.

My business scaled the moment my life simplified.

BEN ALLGEYER

A good Tuesday, five years out

Not the one that impresses people. The one that feeds you.

What does a good Tuesday look like in five years?

What would have to be true about your business for that Tuesday to happen?

What are you building instead, right now?

The overhead audit

List every recurring cost in your business. For each one, name what it made you last month, in dollars. If you can't name it, that's your answer.

WHAT IT IS	COST / MONTH	WHAT IT MADE ME LAST MONTH	KEEP OR CUT?

What are you keeping purely out of ego?

Support systems

These three are the ceiling on your business. Rate each one honestly, 1–10, then name one thing you'll change.

WHAT IT IS	HIS LINE	RATE 1–10	ONE THING I'LL CHANGE
Health	You can't out-CRM a body that's falling apart.
Relationships	The most expensive thing to get wrong.
Mind	Every bad deal I did, I did tired, scared, or both.

The swap table

What Ben did, what works instead, and where you actually are right now.

WHAT HE DID	WHAT WORKS	WHERE I AM RIGHT NOW
One exit strategy	Multiple exits, higher conversion
Big fixed overhead	Minimal fixed costs, less stress
Big team	Small elite team, real accountability
Business first, life later	Life vision first, business fits inside it
Fast	Slow and intentional
Reactive	Daily habits: meditation, reflection, alignment

Which row costs you the most right now?

Two of his lines worth keeping: you marry someone in seconds and divorce them in years, so don't give away equity because you're impatient — and paper saves partnerships. Documentation isn't distrust; it's how you protect the relationship.
